SOME THINGS LOVE ME.

BY T. BUCHANAN READ.

All within and all without me Feel a melancholy thrill; And the darkness hangs about me, Oh how still; To my feet, the river glideth Through the shadow, sullen, dark; On the stream the white moon rideth, Like a barque. And the linden leans above me, Till I think some things there be, In this dreary world that love me.

Even me! Gentle flowers are springing near me, Shedding sweetest breath around, Countless voices rise to cheer me,

From the ground. And the lone bird comes-I hear it In the tall and windy pine Pour the sadness of its spirit

Into mine. There it swings and sings above me, Till I think some things there be In this dreary world that love me, Even me!

Now the moon bath floated to me, On the stream I see it sway, Swinging, boat-like, is 't would woo me, Far away---

And the stars bend from the azure, I could reach them where I lie, And they whisper all the pleasure Of the sky. There they hang and smile above me,

'Till I think some things there be In the very heavens that love me, Even me!

A WINDY NIGHT.

BY T. BUCHANAN R

Alow and aloof, Over the roof, How the tempests swell and roar! Though no foot is natir, Though the cat and the cur Lie dozing along the kitchen floor, There are feet of air On every stair! Through every hall-Through each gusty door,

There's a jostle and bustle, With a silken rustle, Like the meeting of guests at a festival! Alow and aloof, Over the roof,

How the stormy tempests swell! And make the vane On the spire complain-They heave at the steeple with might and main And burst and sweep Into the belirey on the bell!

They smite it so hard, and they smite it so well,

That the sexton tosses his arms in sleep And dreams he is ringing a funeral knell.

The day that woman draggles her petticoats in the mire of politics, and mingles with the rowdy influences of the ballot-box, the institution of marriage will be at an end, and society will rapidly relapse into barbarism. Woman has her rights, as well as her duties; but they do not lie in this direction. She has a right to be beautiful; a right to be protected; a right to exercise her conjugal affections and her maternal instincts; a right to reign in our hearts, but not on our thrones. Her duties are, to nurse and to nurture, to mould and to educate; to love and bless and adorn the world. She was not made to lead armies, to sway sceptres, to command ships. Her true "sphere" is purely a domestic one; growth of several western cities: her true home is by our hearths and in our exist on the earth to-day a woman who is righted by the softening and elevating in-
